Begin Announces He'll Quit, Setting Off Political Turmoil

Washington Post Service JERUSALEM -- Prime Minister Menachem Begin stunned Israel on Sanday by amouncing his in-tention to resign, but he left open the possibility he will be persuaded nge his mind and remain in the job be has held since 1977.

Mr. Begin made the announ ment during a regular cabinet meeting, setting off a frenzied effort by other government ministers to convince him to stay on. In response to their pleas, be agreed not to tender his resignation before a meeting of government coalition leaders is held Monday.

The reasons behind the announcement were not clear, but there was a consensus that the 70year-old prime minister was serious about resigning and not engaged in a tactical move to counter discontent in his ruling coalition.

Mr. Begin is in frail health and has been left despondent by the death of his wife, Aliza, in November and the continuing Israeli casualties in Lebanon.

"Menachem Begin is not Machi-avelli," said his chief spokesman, Uri Porat, "and when he says something he means it." But Mr. Porat added: "It's not definite. He can change his mind."

Israel Radio quoted sources close to Mr. Begin as saying they expected him to tender his resignation to President Chaim Herzog, possibly as early as Monday. The move, however, would not necessarily spell the end of Mr. Begin's stormy political career unless he decided to leave public life alto-

Under Israeli law, his resignation would also mean the resignation of his government. But the existing government, its powers somewhat enhanced, would remain in power until a new government was formed — by either Mr. Begin or some other leader of his Likud coalition, or by the opposition Labor

A resignation could also lead to carry parliamentary elections in Israel, which are not due until 1985. In either case, the formation of a new government could take weeks.

Andropov's Offer on Missiles Flawed In 2 Key Areas, U.S. Arms Aide Says

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - A scuior administration official has indicated that the United States was disappointed by Yuri V. Andropov's atest arms-control statement. The official said the offer failed to show flexibility on two of the key issues holding up progress in negotiations on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe.

The official said the Soviet leader, in an interview in Pravda made pubbe on Friday, had made one forthcoming statement — that Moscow would destroy and not just relocate any missiles it agreed to reduce from its force of missiles in the European part of the Soviet

The first deployment of some Pershing-2 missiles is to begin in West Germany at the end of the year. Cruise missiles are to be deployed subsequently in Britain, Italy and West Germany and perhaps in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Another official said the chief U.S. negotiator at the mediumrange missile talks. Paul H. Nitze. has told aides in Washington that he does not expect substantial progress until the first missiles are actually deployed and Moscow realizes it cannot prevent it.

In a formal comment on Mr.

Andropov's latest proposal, the State Department said Friday night that it would be "a positive sign" if the Soviet Union confirmed the proposal at the negotiating table in Geneva.

But the department added that there appeared to be no change "in the Soviet pursuit of an unequal outcome" in the number of missiles deployed. The department also noted that the Soviet Union continued to seek an agreement "limited only to Europe."

Gromyko Will Visit France Sept. 6

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union is to hold talks in Paris next month, his first trip there for more than three years, Tass announced Sunday.

Diplomats said the visit appeared aimed at patching up relations with France. Ties have been strained over a range of issues, including President François Mitterrand's support for deployment of new U.S. missiles. and the expulsion of Soviet diplomatic personnel from Paris.

In Paris, the External Relations Ministry said Mr. Gromyko, who was last in France in April 1980, would hold talks with government officials Sept. 6 on his way to attend the Conference on European Security in Madrid the next day. Mr. Gromyko's visit returns a trip to Moscow in February by the external relations minister, Claude Cheysson.

Hijacked Air France Jet Lands in Iran

BEIRUT (AP) - An Air France Boeing 727 commandeered over Europe by four Arab gunmen landed Sunday in Tehran more than 24 hours after the hijacking began. Iranian radio said the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane and 16 hostages within 48 hours unless France met political demands.

In Paris, an Air France spokesman said the hostage passengers included three Americans, six French citizens and one Swede, and that seven members of the French crew also were held. The hijackers commandecred the plane Saturday on the way from Vienna to Paris, reportedly with 114 people aboard. Several passengers were released at refueling stops in Europe.

An Iranian broadcast monitored in Londoo said the gummen, who were carrying Tunisian passports but insisted they were Lebanese, demanded freedom for several Lebanese held in French pills and an end to French pills and an end to French bijecters emphasized that military aid to Iraq, Chad and Lebanon. "The hijackers emphasized that if the government of France does oot comply with their demands they will blow up the plane in 48 hours," the broadcast said.

Soviet Decree Emphasizes Technology MOSCOW (Renters) - The Soviet leadership called Sunday for a

speedup in the development of new technology, saying it was vital to keep up with the pace of change in the West.

In a decree published in the press, the government criticized the industrial ministries and the Academy of Sciences for failing to ensure development of oew technology. It ordered factories to expand research departments and said measures would be taken to assure a swifter exchange of technical knowledge within the country.

The decree said the technology issue was vital because it is one of the "main areas of competition between the socialist and capitalist systems."

Publish and Perish

The Reagan administration in trying to stifle leaks has greatly expanded the oumber of officials required to get prior government approval for writ-ings that contain classified information or deal even with nonsecret intelligence matters.

New Justice Department regulations cover all government employees with high-level security clearances. Previously, only employees in intelligence-related work had to submit material for approval.

The new rules require employees to sign an agreement that they will forfeit royalties on any writings or speeches that violate the prepublication rule. A precedent for the forfeiture was set in 1980, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Frank Snepp, a former Central Intelligence Agency officer, had violated secrecy agreements with his book "Decent Inter-

The officials said Friday that talks would also be renewed on establishing consulates in New York and Kiev. Both projects had been suspended by the United States in response to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979.

A State Department official said that the United States proposed earlier in the summer that the talks be resumed and that the Soviet Union's response was received a few weeks ago. Discussions on the exchange accord are expected to begin in about a month, probably in Moscow, talks on the consulate question are likely to be held in Washington at the same time.

The decision to take steps toward more normal relations was disclosed one day after the secretary of Agriculture, John R. Block, signed a five-year grain agreement in Moscow in which Washington pledged not to interrupt its supply of grain. In addition, the Reagan adminis tration has taken some other actions meant to signal a willingness to improve relations, the State Department officials said.

These include the decision last weekend to allow the sale, without export licensing, of tractors to lay which was first signed in 1958, had run into trouble because Moscow pipelines in the Soviet Union; the decision to let the son of a Soviet diplomat return to Moscow, even though the youth, Andrei V. # Marching: 1963, 1983

Arms Control Stirrings

Other Opinion

Samurday's civil rights march in Washington was not the march of 1963. The march of Aug. 27, 1983, was less focused, less thematic, less morally intense. It was also more political in a particular sense. There were stretches, hearing the rhetoric - the boilerplate, really - that some of its speakers thought fitting for the occasion, when you might have imagined you were sitting through those preliminary, timekilling sessions at a Democratic National Convention when speaker after speaker jumps up and down on the Republican adversary.

Down with Reagan! - that was the message. We do not speak as particular admirers of the Reagan administration's attitude toward civil rights. But we do think that so far as the fulfillment of Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream is concerned, anyone who believes that the Reagan government is the problem and that its replacement is the solution is living a different kind of dream: a pipedream.

Precisely because the terrain has become so much more complicated than it once was, because so many different interests and values and claims have come into conflict in the drive to fulfill the promise of racial justice, a renewal of the essentially simple and unassailable moral proposition involved was a good and necessary idea. There were many speakers who, in various parts of their speeches, did handsome-ly recapture and rekindle the commitment that the 1963 march was all about.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson himself, speak-

When Mr. Adelman was nominated in Janu-

When he was named, the arms control agen-

Most damaging, the operations analysis divi-

But 20 years later we do not have equality. We have moved in, now we must move up ... "), called attention to the classic, mean irony. Progress inevitably reveals new barriers and troubles, or, more exactly, it reveals barriers and troubles that one did not even have the luxury of addressing before when so many stark, elementary injustices had yet to be addressed.

With or without romance and nostalgia, it is almost impossible to recreate the mood and condition of civil rights in 1963 with any fidelity. Few now remember the apprehension that seized both blacks and whites as to whether such a march could be peaceable. How much the nation was to experience and learn -much of it bloody and painful - about the politics of mass mobilization in the years to follow. And how innocent and gentle that 1963 march now seems in retrospect.

Our sense of Saturday's march is that unsurprisingly, given the horrendous difficulties and the great disappointments attending the current effort to achieve social and racial justice in America — it revealed a movement that has yet to find its most persuasive theme and its voice. We also believe that the act of assembly was essential and that the fundamental commitment it honored is as alive and compelling today as it was in the days when Martin Luther King Jr. lived.

it possible. The half dozen new arms control

The National Interest: Moral Authority and New Rules WASHINGTON - Today the

WASHINGTON — Today the Russians have a number of incentives to give up their place in the nuclear folie à deux with America. The brutal invasion of Afghanistan has turned into a gigantic flop that has cost the Soviet reputation dearly in the Third World. The increasing cost of armaments to the Soviets, evidenced by the ever larger share they take of Soviet GNP, is a sign of deep strain between consumer dend and defense production.

The yearning among young people for a freer life and the increasing official tolerance in Moscow for open expression of popular discontent, even among workers, are obvious signs of internal pressures on the ruling Communist Party gerontocracy. The Soviet Union seems to be entering a period of ferment, when it will be attracted to options that allow it to accommodate change with a minimum of internal upheaval. If America could present the Russians with a new set of policy objectives that were consistent with U.S. interests and with the present character of American society, they would be more likely to respond favorably.

And of course other nations would be quick to see the merit of a system of security that decreased the role of the superpowers as ex cathedra arbiters of world politics.

The world's deteriorating international system should be a warning signal that immediate and dramatic action must be taken to establish new rules of international behavior. In the last nine years there have been at least nine interventions by one nation into another. This international anarchy is breeding disaster.

Policymakers have mistakenly believed that the Western alliance is primarily military. In fact the mili-tary aspects of the alliance invariably lead to greater division among the Western democracies, which are and should be allied by common values and not hy common militarism.

Today's NATO "strategy" is more the product of bureaucratic inertia than serious military thinking. Does anyone believe that the U.S. Congress of 1983 would agree to send 7,000 nuclear weapons to Western Europe - the number that has wound up there virtually by accident? Does anyone believe that the nations of Western Europe would now accept 7,000 nuclear weapons if the United States offered to send them?

The adage that one prepares for war in order to have peace is contradicted by virtually every war in history. If one seeks a platitude upon which to base a policy, it would be better to recall William Graham Summer's phrase, "What we prepare for is what we shall get."

Arms strategists love to play the olitics of balance of power. National security bureaucrats and policymakers revel in playing one nation against another. It is thought good for the American national interest if China and the Soviet Union are at sword's point, and advantageous if military and economic dependencies develop between the United States and the Third World. But it is little more than hubris to think that the United States controls the actions

Thus, American leadership after President Kennedy's death and throughout the Victuam War committed the cardinal sin of assuming that military force would accomplish political victory. This did not take into account the nature of wars of national resistance and decolonization. The French, for example, "won" the war against the Algerians, but the victory meant nothing politically.

American intervention militarily or covertly in Third World nations increases devastation and in oo way will solve their political problems of bunger, oppression, and disease. Nor will increased levels of violence result in stability or in restoring oligarchy to its former dominance.

As Martin Luther King Jr. understood so well, the power of the police in enforcing unjust laws will not be of large numbers of people. That also applies to international politics.

Statesmen would do well to court moral authority as well as economic and military authority. This does not mean that the United States should militarily overthrow apartheid regimes, or militarily assist liberation movements. It does require a different time clock that will enable us to see international pobtics in the context of long-term historical changes.

America should embrace the hu-man rights principles of Martin Lu-ther King Jr. in its foreign policy. This would mean, for example, embracing the values proclaimed in various covenants on human rights that America has yet to ratify.

The time is propitious for studying ooe Cold War diplomatic success-that allowed the Umted States to cut its military budget and that guaran-teed freedom and stability in Central Europe. I speak of the Austrian state treaty signed in 1955 by the great, powers, including the Soviet Union, which resulted in the removal of foreign troops - including Soviet occupation troops - from Austrian soil. American security would be best served economically and politically if.

the Warsaw Pact and the NATO alliance initiated discussions to transform regional pact arrangements as the first stage of a world security program that de-emphasizes military forces and places emphasis on disarmament and the construction of a viable international pobtical order.

Who remembers that in 1961 the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to a framework for acheiving general and complete disarmament? Known as the McCloy-Zorin agreement, this successful negotiation led to both nations tabling their respec-tive proposals in 1962. Unfortunately, these discussions were superseded by concern with more "realistic" and incremental measures that accepted arms control as the only way to deal with the arms race.

But arms control has a fatal flaw. Ir guarantees that an arms race will break out with weapons that are not-It should be recalled that the Unit-

The puzzing thing about Mr. Reagan is that he says so many outrageous things in public, but acts so cautiously in private. He condemns the Soute Height as an experient the Soviet Union as an "evil empire" for its invasion of Afghanistan, its pressure on Poland and its "godless philosopby," denounces his allies for selling the gas pipeline facilities to the Soviet Union, and then lifts con-trols on the sale of pipe-laying equip-ment to the Russians and signs an agreement to supply them with 9 million tons of grain a year for the next five years, Mr. Reagan's own officials

What is surprising coming out of a poor and church background is that Mr. Reagan seems so indifferent to the conscience of the preachers and the plight of the unemployed workers. These are the people he came from, and he seems to have forgotten their faith and longing.

The point about the weekend's march in Washington is to remember Martin Luther King crying out from the Lincoln Memorial, "I have a dream!" In many ways his dream has been realized. Look around and you can see how black people have achieved their price in these last 20 years, while not forgetting the many who have been left behind.

But what is the dream now? If Mr. Reagan had stayed home in Washington and faced the crowd, what would be have said in the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial? Like Lincoln at the end of the war between the states, would he have asked Americans to bind up their wounds and try to get together? And to think, as Lincoln thought, that as the world is anew, we must think anew, respecting one another and working together?

Here was Joseph Rollins, a 75year-old retired postal worker from Cairo, Illinois, who marched 20 years ago. "White people used to put their dogs on me and laugh about it," he said. # AMERICAN WAYS

Energies in Los Angeles

By David Hyun

L OS ANGELES — An American miracle of global importance is unfolding in Los Angeles. A new world view is forming, and Asian-Americans are among its creators. There is also an old world view that sees the recent immigration of people across the Pacific as too much and too fast; it reads portents of disaster in the strange signs in foreign lan-guages that dominate many areas of the ciry. The historical majority sta-tus enjoyed by European-Americans in American cities is challenged on the edge of the Pacific, and it doesn't feel right — "It isn't American."
The old view had prevailed since the 1920s and '30s, when the philosophies, cultures and religions of East and West were popularly evaluated and judged as superior or inferior, positive or negative, threatening or non-threatening. East and West were viewed in an adversary context.

The old view is no longer service-able. It increases misunderstandings among European-Americans. It fosters fear and hostility over the industry and capability of Asians — jeal-ousy of Japanese production and management, sucers about Taiwan and Hong Kong capital being "sec-ond-rate," mistrust of Korean thrift and industry, contempt for the poorer ranks of every nationality.

The new world view allows diverse philosophies, cultures and religions to mingle and share. East and West are not adversary or competitive as much as friendly and supportive. The historic era of superiority and dominance by the West over the East is rapidly passing. In its place a new era of compatibility and cooperation is taking shape under American polit-ical and business leadership. The new world view has dramatically changed the Asian role. No longer stifled in ghettos as in times past. Asian-Americans are participating increasingly in the American mainstream. One Korean-American contribution under this new world view may be instructive. Although for thousands of years

Korea and Japan were friendly, the

this hostility is being laid aside. In Los Angeles for 20 years Japa-nese-Americans fought urban decay in Little Tokyo. Private redevelopment failed. Success took a blending of federal funding with private investments from Japan, local entrepreneurs and new Japanese immigrants. This has succeeded. And in the long struggle two positions of leadership were given to Korean-Americans — as director of the redevelopment project office, and as developer-manager of the Japanese Village Plaza shopping center, a key to the revitalization of Little Tokyo. If Korean- and Japanese-Ameri-cans can set aside historic prejudices, surely European-Americans can set aside an old world view of 100 years and see the miracle of Los Angeles. The new, large influx of Asians is unlike any previous immigration. It is now highly selective, generally admit-ting only those of high education, high skills and adequate finances who share attitudes of industry and dedication to the American way of democracy. Among the immigrants are many from important families, great financial bouses and large institutions. The new immigrants have proved immediately and immensely capable despite language barriers.

Their great, historically unique gathering in one metropolis is a magnificent reversal of ancient earnities and prejudices, and the city has bene-fited enormously. Urban decay has been reversed in many neighborhoods without federal aid. The capital of immigrants and refugees is revitalizing local capital. The resources and vitality of the new immigrants are helping to overcome the problems of deterioration and mertia.

The miracle emerging from these efforts is that of Los Angeles becoming the greatest cosmopolitan metropolis of the world -a gateway for trade, goods, culture and peoples across the Pacific in such volume as to eclipse any across the Atlantic.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR only language act will never be acceptable to the Tamils, just as the Sinhalese will never agree to separate For a Federal Sri Lanka

Sri Lanka, like nearby India, consisted of several kingdoms before it was colonized. The British, masters of "divide and rule," had no intention of unifying the peoples in their colo-nics. India was unified for the first time in thousands of years, under the leadership of Mohandas Gandhi, during its struggle for independence. Unification did not take piace in Sri Lanka. When independence came in 1948, the minority Tamils in the north and east were not integrated.

The Moslems of British India demanded and obtained a separate nation. In Sri Lanka, the Tamils trusted the majority Sinhalese, and integration was gradually taking place until, in 1966, Sinhalese was made the only official language of Sri Lanka. Only Tamils and Marxists opposed the browners and posed the language act.

The concern of Tanals that they could lose their cultural identity is understandable. So their main political party asked, using peaceful meth-ods only, for a federal government, as in India. It was the refusal by successive governments to grant this de-mand, or even to consider it, that led to the present radical demand for a separate Tamil nation.

The sad truth is that the Sinhalese-

If it or something like it is not achieved soon, I am afraid worse is to come. J. ANANDAN. The indigenous Tamils of the north and east are one of the oidest ethnic groups of Sri Lanka and as such are entitled to every social and political right enjoyed by the majority com-munity, the Sinhalese. It is important that at a critical time like this, when the very existence of a minority ethnic group is threatened, its history be correctly rendered in news reports. K. SUBRAMANIAM.

The Sinhalese owe the Tamils a lot culturally, economically and socially. Yet not only is the government of President Junius R. Jayewardene trying to dilute the ethnicity of the Tamils, it has made them feel very insecure in their own land.

Unrest Is Confined — So Far

By William K. Stevens New York Times Service

KARACHI, Pakistan - Nearly wo weeks of anti-government agitation and rioting in the southern Pakistani province of Sind have posed the first major challenge to President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's military government since it seized power in a coup six years ago

But both Western and Pakistani analysts say that unless the agitation spreads northeastward to the powerful, politically dominant state of Punjab, the challenge is unlikely to constitute a basic threat to the Zia regime.

The outburst began with a call for civil disobedience by an alliance of eight political parties that have been banned by the government.
Protesters in Sindhi towns up and down the Indus River valley have attacked, vandalized and set fire to government offices, railway stations, post offices, court houses state-owned banks and other symbols of government. They have torn up railroad tracks and invaded jails to release prisoners arrested during the rioting.

The goal of the protest is to force

an immediate end to martial law, a restoration of the civil rights and democratic institutions suspended by the Zia government, and early

The government has replied with a crackdown in which thousands have been arrested, whole towns taken over by the army, protest leaders jailed or driven underground and more than 100 people sentenced by summary military courts to imprisonment and flog-

For all that, however, the disruptions have been confined mostly to Sind, of which Karachi is the capital, an area that has long feit alienated from the rest of the country. Analysts who have followed the situation closely say they believe it unlikely that the protest will bring down the government unless it also catches fire in Punjab, the most populous of Pakistan's four prov-

Punjab dominates the country in almost every way. Nearly twothirds of Pakistan's people live there in a hish, flat countryside of productive farms and relative prosperity, and many tend to like things the way they are, Most of the coun try's ruling military leaders, includ-ing General Zia himself, are Punjabis, and Punjab is the regime's stronghold.

Gandhi, Losing Votes, Plays on Hindu Emotions

By William Claiborne

Washington Post Service NEW DELHI - Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in a major shift in political strategy aimed at offsetting her losses due to tising region-alism in India, has embarked on a campaign to generate a wave of Hindu oationalism behind her party in the northern states before the oext parliamentary elections.

ic plain, which forms the core of Hindu-Aryan India and which traditionally fills more than half the seats in Parliament, Mrs. Gandhi is increasingly appealing to strong re-ligious and linguistic sentiments in what appears to be an effort to arouse opinion against the peripheral, oon-Hindi-speaking states that have rebelled against the au-thority of her governing Congress-I

The opposition alliance, concerned that her strategy could keep the party in power in national elections that may be held as early as tiext spring, and by January 1985 at the latest, is planning to counter with a campaign accusing the prime minister of indulging in a divisive "politics of communalism"

Hindus make up 73 percent of India's population of more than 700 million, compared with Moslems' 12 percent. However, only 20 percent of the population speaks Hindi, the indigenous official lan-guage, and many ethnic and cultur-al differences separate the Hindus of the Indo-Gangetic plain from those of other parts of India.

Life in India has long been strained by communal tensions. Although Hindu-Moslem strains have received the most attention, there has recently been an increase in conflict between Hindus and on-Moslem communióes, such as Sikhs, and between the different astes of the Hindu religion.

Paradoxically, the traditional roles of the Congress-1 Party, the relentless champion of national unity, and the Bharatiya Janata Party, which has always appealed to northern India's nostalgia for the great Hindu empires, appear headed for a reversal.

"The Congress Party has become the defender of Hindu rights overnight," the leader of the Bharatiya Janata Party, Atal Behari Vajpayee, said in ao toterview. They're sounding like the RSS." He was referring to the Rashtriya Swayamsewak Sangh, an extremist organization of Hindu zealots that theirs of the Aryan conquerers of ancient India

40 Sikh Activists Held To Foil Work Stoppage

NEW DELHI - About 40 leaders and activists of Akali Dal, the militant party demanding more powers for Sikhs in India's Punjab state, have been arrested in Kapurthala, 240 miles (385 kilomeiers) northwest of New Delhi.

The police moved Friday in an attempt to stave off a work stoppage threatened for Monday to

Mr. Vajpayee, who has led an effort to liberalize his party and broaden its constituency to include non-Hindus and extend its influence beyond the northern Hindi-speaking belt, said he was aware of the irony of Mrs. Gandhi's shift and his own party's transformation.

"But she is oot doing it for Hindu rights," Mr. Vajpayee said. "She is doing it for herself and her son, to perpetuate her family's power any way she can."

Mrs. Gandhi's son, Rajiv, 39, is the heir apparent of the family political dynasty, which began with India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, her father.

The testing ground for Mrs. Gandhi's new strategy is the broad swath of Gangetic India known by orthodox Hindus as Aryavarta. It includes the northern states of Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Haryana and the union territory of New Delhi, as well as the predominantly Hindu portions of the states of Punjab and ammu and Kashmir. Stung by recent election setbacks in several southern states, includ-ing Andhra Pradesh and Kamataka, and sensitive to the growing strength of regional parties in such other states as Tamil Nadu, Mrs. Gandhi appears to have decided to cut her losses and consolidate her strength in the northern Hindispeaking belt. Her party has lost more states to opposition parties in the last year than at any time before, with the exception of when she was voted out of office in 1977 for two years. With a newly formed alliance of southern India's regional parties collectively opposing her party's policies, the future of Congress-I in that part of the country seems doubtful. The signs that she plans to focus her attention on the Indo-Gangetic plain and appeal especially to granted. strong Hindn sentiments have been While southern states, are bent on "bal-kanizing" India in the name of regional autonomy.

Her opponents interpret her actions as being intended to create a crisis atmosphere in which Hindispeaking India should rally around its prime minister to save the Indian union.

In the Punjah, whose population esponses racial superiority of the is cearly equally divided between Hindus and Sikhs, several Hindurights groups have sprung up, ap-parently under the sponsorship of the Congress-I Party, as forums for militant Hindu nationalism.

During the state assembly elections in Jammu and Kashmir in Inne. Mrs. Gandhi was reported to have had an opportunity to link Congress-I with the ruling Moslem National Conference Party. But she passed up the chance, national conference sources said, so she

The danger of creating a wave of strong Hindu nationalist sentiment in oorthern India, besides creating a schism between Hindu India and non-Hindu India, or Hindi-speaking India and oon-Hindi-speaking India, is that Mrs. Gandhi could lose control of the movement, and it could grow to challenge the au-thority of Congress-I, said Pran Chopra, a political scientist with

ew Issues Expected as Market Looks Expensive Against U.S. Treasuries

ONDON - The Eurobond market had a brief bout of optimism this month, but quickly recovered.

As the news from New York turned bearish again last week, Euroands looked expensive compared with U.S. Treasury paper. "I think the arket has just about had its run for a while," said Allan Wilson, an ecutive director at Continental Illinois Ltd. in London. He predicted a retrenchment" when trading resumes this week.

In the circumstances, dealers say they expect a light helping of new

Then came Friday's money-suply report, showing a modest de-line of $200 million in M-1 when he market was primed for a lunge of nearly $1 billion.

Even before those setbacks, the Eurobond market was looking expenive in relation to U.S. Treasuries.

Jeffrey Hanna, a senior analyst at Salomon Brothers in New York, :ported that the spread between the yields of Treasuries and top-quality urodollar bonds was unusually thin. As of Thursday, 10-year Treasury ond yields averaged 11.65 percent on a semi-annual basis. On the same asis, prime Eurodollar bonds were just 14 basis points higher, at 11.79

That spread compares with an average of 76 basis points over the past 2 months and 60 to 65 points over the past five years, Mr. Hanna said. For investors who expect a sharp rally, "now is a very good time to witch from Eurobonds to Treasuries," he said, noting that Treasury rices probably would rise much more steeply in response to a decline in

Salomon Sees Higher Rates

Because Salomon remains persuaded that rates are headed higher, owever, it does not recommend such switches. When interest rates rise, reasuries tend to fall much further than Eurobonds.

Even so, investors are likely to avoid buying more Eurobonds until ields return to a more normal relation. Dante Montalbetti, chief Euroond trader at Merrill Lynch in London, said: "At the moment, it still aakes more sense to be invested in Treasuries.

To overcome that problem, the World Bank affixed fairly generous erms to last week's new $200-million note issue. The 10-year issue, led by Deutsche Bank and Crédit Suisse First Boston, was priced at par and arries a coupon of 12 percent. Syndicate sources said the issue was rought to the Eurobond market only after the World Bank had failed to et the terms it wanted from the U.S. market.

U.S. Automakers Thriving in European Market

By John Tagliabue New York Times Service

BONN - U.S. car makers, long trailing in the European field, are finding themselves in the driver's seat. For the first time, Europe's leading seller is a U.S. company — Ford Motor Co. — and General Motors is scoring sharp sales gains in the Continent's auto markets.

In the first half of this year, Ford of Europe sold 726,000 vehicles, edging out Renault, the French antomaker, as the largest seller. Ford, whose sales rose more than 11 percent in the half, now has a 12.6percent share of Europe's market, jumping into first place from fifth last year. Renault's sales fell nearly 10 percent, to 705,200 cars.

But the sharpest growth came at General Motors' European operations. No. 6 in the market. GM's sales increased nearly 25 percent in the first half from a year earlier. Its share of the European market has reached 11.9 percent, compared with 9.7 percent for all of

The upswing in Europe is welcome news at both companies' U.S. headquarters. Strains on European profitability were acutely felt in recent years, as Ford and GM suffered prolonged slumps in their

Two years ago, GM had a loss of more than $425 million in Europe. Last year things turned around, and the big automaker had a 235.2-million profit in Europe. This year, Ferdinand Beickler, the chief executive officer at Opel, the West German subsidiary of GM, said he expects "significantly higher" earnings.

Ford Werke, the big West German unit, last month reported a $123.7-million profit for 1982, after a $54.7-million profit in 1981. In 1980, the division had a loss of $184.8 million.

Industry analysts say the Americans' sales success is rooted first in appealing products. But they also credit Ford and GM with more skillful marketing, more persistent cost-cutting and an exploitation of their trans-Atlantic presence.

John Lawson, an auto-market analyst at Economic Models, a London consulting firm, said, "At Ford, they have two arrows in their quiver." Ford's new Sierra and the Orion, a version of the popular Escort that Ford will introduce next month, "should do very

Since Ford introduced the Sierra, a medium-sized car sold in the United States as the Tempo, at the Paris auto show one year ago, the sleek, futuristic model has spearheaded Ford's European sales success. Its sales were largely responsible for the 26.2 percent production increase at Ford's West German plants in this year's first balf, Daniel Goeudevert, Ford Werke's chief executive, told a recent news

Similarly, Opel's Corsa, a front-wheel-drive subcompact S-car designed by Opel and built in Spain, has pushed up GM's sales across the Continent since its introduction last year.

By all accounts, the new array of attractive models has been only one factor in the U.S. success. "Internally, both GM and Ford did a better job of cost reduction," said Donald Kress, an auto analyst at Booz, Allen & Hamilton, in Paris. "They really put people's feet to Opel, for example, has had an early-retirement program for three years. Both Ford and GM are today producing many more cars with fewer people.

Analysis say that several European automakers have also done well in bringing down costs. But while European automakers gener-ally focused on the factory floor, raising productivity by installing robots and other machinery, the U.S. antomakers get higher marks for slashing costs away from the assembly line, by sorting out the tangled underbrush of suppliers that pushed up costs for most car manufacturers outside Japan and for cutting management overhead.

Another factor behind the U.S. success, other analysts said, was the adroit use of frequent product introductions as a marketing tool. This marketing technique, long a standby in Detroit's U.S. marketing, has became cheaper and easier to exploit, thanks to increased automation and new production methods.

"The Europeans tend to bring out a product and leave it on the market for, say, 10 years," said one analyst, who asked not to be named. Volkswagen's new Golf, due out this autumn, has disappointed numerous critics, who say it is a slightly larger but basically (Continued on Page 9, Col. 5)

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service are investigating a New York securities dealer accused by the government of providing more than $50 million in fraudulent fedral income-tax write-offs for show pusiness celebrities as well as bankers, lawyers and businessmen, according to court records.

The records filed in federal court n New York show that the twoear investigation has focused on Vichael Senft and two of his companies: Sentinel Government Secuities, a major dealer in government securities, and Sentinel Financial instruments, a related firm. The locuments indicate that in Novemper 1981 alone, Sentinel Government handled $1.3 billion in gov-

Japan for Transit Talks

SINGAPORE — Senior Singapore government officials are to visit Japan shortly to discuss Japanese government participation in financing a 5-billion Singapore dollar (about $2.3-hillion) urban rail system for Singapore, the Provisional Mass Rapid Transit Authority said.

The officials also plan similar talks with other governments whose nationals have tendered for contracts in the project, the officials said Friday. Companies from Japan, the United States, South Korea, and Western European countries have bid for contracts. Many have asked their governments for export financing to make their bids more competitive.

GM Chief Plans Tokyo Visit

TOKYO - Roger B. Smith. General Motors Corp.'s chairman. will visit Tokyo this week to discuss the prospects for an extension of Japan's voluntary car-export-restraint agreement with the United States, government sources said. The sources said Saturday that Mr. Smith was scheduled in arrive in Tokyo Wednesday and confer with Prime Minister Vasuhiro Nakasone, Susuke Uno, the interna-tional trade and industry minister, and other officials.

The report came as U.S. government and industry leaders pressed Japan to extend Japanese car-export controls beyond next March.

Japan has limited its annual car shipments to the United States to 1.68 million units annually during ailing U.S. auto industry.

Government officials have so far stated that the voluntary curbs would end on March 31 next year. However, speaking to foreign correspondents Friday, Mr. Uno hinted at a possibility of Japan agreeing to extend the controls.

He said the Japanese govern ment is determined to "harmonious trade relations" with the United States - a statement regarded as indicating an extension of the car-shipment restraint.

The government sources said executives of Toyota Motor Corp. on the proposed joint venture to produce Toyota-developed fuel-efficient cars at the idle GM plant in Fremont, California, beginning late next year.

A DARK AND DISTANT SHORE

By Reay Tannahill. 592 pp. $16.95. St. Martin's Press, 175 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010.

AN ancient, hrooding castle; a precocious and dispossessed child; an unfortunate marriage; a lifelong passion for one errant man; wars, crises and personal feuds; death. birth and the exigencies of fortune.

Ah, yes — I said to myself — here we go again! All the cliched but nonetheless happily received ingredients of the historical romance. And, yes - Reay Tannahill's "A Dark and Distant Shore" does indeed serve up this rather overfamiliar amalgam, hut it is as far from a mere rehash of hackneyed ideas as Land's End is from John o' Groats.

At the age of 6 in 1803, Vilia Cameron reluctantly leaves her home in the West High-lands of Scotland. Tannahill, while filling the subsequent 592 pages with the story of how Cameron regains the castle of Kinvail for her family, ushers the reader through pretty well all the main events of the rest of the century— on three continents and in several countries. Very well done it is, too, with the meticulous and esoteric detail on manners, dress, money law and industry to be expected from a social historian of repute, and author of the fascinat-ing "Sex in History" and its hardly less enthralling companion volume 'Food in Histo-

Unlike many novels in this mode, however transitions in opinion, fashion and political thinking from the Regency to the last years of Victoria are touched on with assured finesse and not intruded artificially into the parrative as mere devices to change the scene or indicate the passage of time. As a result one becomes caught up in the flow of the years.

Nor is this all. Reay Tannahill is a fine storyteller with a beautiful command of English, a sound ear for dialogue, and an appreciation of the scenery and climatic vagaries of the Highlands that is downright poetic. More-over, she can convey her feeling for that dra-matic landscape with so evocative a clarity that one can almost hear the sea gulls mewing and smell the salt on the damp wind.

The book follows the history of four generations of two families, complicated by all possible bonds of relationship both legitimate and reprehensible. In my experience such sagas often lapse into confusion as the characters proliferate, but Tannahill has as sure a way with character as with background, and he subsidiary family members and servants are as 41.

clearly drawn as the principals. In particular, Vilia Cameron is a believably paradoxical human being whose progress from youth to old age is marked by fine psychological probability. Vilia's lover, Perry Randall, is also a continually engaging character whose ansences from the main story line are used skillfully to keep the reader's interest; he, like Vilia, ages and alters with a thoroughgoing and prosaic probability not often vouchsafed to 'heroes." The end of the long love affair, dry, accepting, scarcely tragic, is, again, managed with a graceful fidelity to human truth much more affecting than any more histrionic renunciation could be.

Drama there is in plenty, of course, and tragedy and evil deeds, but the villains are carefully drawn, their descent into perfide gradual and prepared for by a valid mix of character defects, accident and outside infinence. And they never strain credulity by being totally obnoxious.

Because the author's descriptions of Scotland are so good, one is conscious that she is less sure of her ground in the United States, France and India. Nevertheless, this is much more a historical novel than a historical romance, and if there is a little too much history perhaps it was not necessary to bring in every major martial and political crisis of the Victorian era quite so directly), the pace seldom slackens for more than a page or two. Escape it is, of course, but in a stimulating and unusually rational form. At the end of the book (and the sentire rainy weekend it took to read it), I was left with that particular sense — half loss, half irritation — that meant I badly wanted more!

Sampson Signs Lucrative Pact With NBA

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets have signed the No. 1 draft pick, Ralph Sampson, to a four-year contract said to be worth more than $1 million per year, making the 7-font-4 center the highest paid rookie in the National Basketball Association, Sampson's agent and team officials announced.

Pressed for details at a news conference, Sampson, a graduate of the University of Virginia, waffled on the exact salary, saying only it would cover "basic necessities of life and a place to be comfortable."

China Applies for Membership in FISA

ZANDVOORT, The Netherlands (AP) — China has applied for membership of the International Auto Sport Federation with the intention of holding international road races and rallies, Jean-Marie Balestre, the FISA president, announced. Balestre said that an old racing track in Beijing was being re-opened and that a Formula Two race would be staged there in 1985. Formula Two is the last stepping stone to Grand Prix category racing for the World Drivers and Constructors champions hims.

China plans to stage two major road rallies in 1984-85, Balestre said. One is expected to be a Hong Kong-Beijing rally that has been planned for some time.

Japanese Wins 7th Straight Cycling Title

ZURICH (Combined Dispatches) — Koichi Nakano of Japan hurst past Yave Cahard of France at the World Cycling Championships on Sunday to win his seventh consecutive gold medal in the professional sprint. In the battle for third place, Masamittan Takizawa, also of Japan, beat Octavio Dazzan of Italy in the first of a best-of-three series.

On Friday, Connie Carpenter, an American, won the women's individual pursuit gold medal. Cynthia Olavarri, her compatriot, took the silver medal, and Jeannie Longo of France won the bronze.

Records Set in 1,500 Meters and Pole Vault

Sydney Marce set a world record of 3 minutes, 31.23 seconds for the 1,500-meter run Sunday in Cologne beating the mark of 3:31.36 set by Steve Ovett in 1980. Marce, a South African who lives in the United States, was clocked over the first 400 meters of the race in 54.65 and passed the 800 mark at 1:52.80. Pierre Quinon of France, meanwhile, eleared 5.82 meters to break the pole vanit record of 5.81 set by Viadimir Polyakev on June 26, 1981. And Edwin Moses of the United States won his 85th straight 400-meter hurdles race, in 47.43 seconds, bettering 48 seconds for the 23d time. A crowd of 55,000 cheered the performances.

Science Caught Up With Itself And Athletes at Caracas Games

By Frank Licsky New York Times Service

CARACAS - The drug scandal that has rocked the Pan American Games is a result of two intertwined occurrences. First, one arm of science caught up with another, and second, too many people refused to believe it

The scientific breakthrough reponsible for this situation was the discovery two decades ago of anabolic steroids, booster drugs that would directly or indirectly improve the performance of athletes. Another scientific breakthrough came in recent months with the improvement of tests to detect the use of these drugs.

There are 91 such generic drugs banned by the International Olym-Athletes were given fair warning that the new tests, employing more sensitive equipment, would uncover recent use of drugs.

But too many athletes refused to believe. They used such banned drugs as the artificial male hormones known as anabolie steroids because they believed them to be body-builders. And they were accustomed to cutting them off two weeks to three months before a competition in which they knew there would be drug testing. Thus, they routinely passed drug tests. But when confronted with the prospect of new tests that could detect drug use farther back, the athletes acted like little children told not to touch a hat stove. They had always touched the stove before and they were never burned. This time, they touched it and they paid the price. The price has been tragic. The

Several U.S. Athletes Still Competed After Failing Earlier Test for Drugs

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - A group of U.S. athletes competed in the Pan American Games in the last two weeks even after most of them had failed precompetition drug tests there, according to U.S. Olympic officials. William E. Simon, the president of the U.S. Olympic Committee confirmed on Friday that the committee had arranged the tests at the request of about 10 of the 600 U.S. athletes who arrived in Caracas. As many as eight of the tests detected traces of anabolic steroids, which are banned in international competition, Simon acknowledged. Asked why USOC officials had not stopped the athletes who had tested positive from competing. Simon said: "That's their privilege. Where is the fine line? Is the USOC supposed to make judgments where we have no procedure in place? I think if we had, it would have been a violation of chivascular disease, liver damage, shrunken testicles and sterility.

The problem is not limited to amateur sports. Nor it is limited to elite athletes. Stories abound of steroid use among athletes in college and high school.

One answer is detection. The West German biochemists who set up the testing laboratory here also tested at the first world track and field championships earlier this: month in Helsinki.

European countries routinely perform drug tests at national championships. The United States does not. And that, said Dr.

Manfred Donike, the West German who heads the laboratory here, is a problem.

The major reason for the lack of testing in the United States has been the expense, Donike said his laboratory charged $100 for each sample in international track com-

The Sounds of Summer

By Jack Rosenthal YEW YORK — A sultry summer Sunday is a time for people to drive somewhere with the kids and when they arrive to buy them a pop. You know, a pop - short for Popsicle — ice on a stick.

A Middle Westerner would exclaim: "Ice cream?" For him, pop is the generic name for soft drinks. That's the right meaning, by golly, and he can prove it. His meaning makes sense - and it's in the dictionary: ". . . so-called from the sound made by drawing the cork of

Farther down the beach, someone may ask, "Want a Fudgicle?"
And someone else will reply, "You mean Fudesicle. It's only logical. If one's a Popsicle, the other has to be a Fudesicle."

Who's right? Everybody's right, but what's noteworthy is how tenaciously people insist, oo matter where they are from, on the terms they grew up with. Otherwise rea-sonable adults suddenly become stubborn about ice-cream words, soft-drink words, playground words — childhood words, the words of summer. There's probably no place in which regional variations are better preserved than in the amber of children's speech. Somehow, because the words were learned early, they have to be right. A segment of the new movie "Twilight Zone" offers an illustrative moment. The children playing "kick the can" declare a truce by shouting, "Olly-olly-oxen-free."

People from New York understand, though they probably grew up with the more literal "Olly-ollyin-come free." They'd probably be amused by the "Bee-bee-bumblebee, everybody in free" of Ohio, and be baffled by the Montana shout of Consider the manifold, sometimes confusing uses of the word soda. It can be a generic word for soft drinks, like pop to the Middle

Westerner or tonic to the Bostonian, or dope to people from South Central states. It can also be a generic word for carbonated water, what others call chub soda, clear soda, white soda or, in New York, seltzer, after sparkling water from the Niederselters district of Germany. And this still does not reach the Byzantine question of bow to define an ice-creum soda. What do you call those little multicolored candy flecks shaken onto cake frosting or into which icecream cones are sometimes dipped? Some people, having no term for them at all, have adopted the New England word, jimmies. In New York, sprinkles seems to predominate, a usage supported by Webster's Third. Over the years, students of regionalism have also heard sparkles, ants, shots, dots and nonpareils, the last referring to those sprinkled on chocolate candy

Ask New York teen-agers the name of that sandwich of heroic proportioos and hard-crusted bread made, among other things, of cold cuts, cheese, pickles and hot sauce and they're apt to say, "A hero." To someone from New Orleans, where it may have originated, it's a poor boy. In New England, it's a grinder; in Philadelphia, a hoagy. Elsewhere, it's commonly a rine, after its shape. An adult who grew up playing on a seesaw is tempted to dismiss as a hick someone who says, reflexively, teeter-totter, or tilting board. People who know the term slide or sliding board will do a double take when they hear a child of Brooklyn call it a sliding pond. Sliding pond? Even the child of Brooklyn, suddenly forced to focus on the term consciously, is driven to speculate that it derives from slides next to water or from "slide upon."

There's a more plausible answer. Remember that New York was once Dutch, observes Frederic Cassidy, chief editor of the Dictionary of American Regiocal English. Then note that the Dutch word for slide is "glijbaan," glij- as in glide, baan as in the German word for track. Sliding track: It's not hard to see how, as the term was passed down over three centuries, baan could became pond.

The larger lesson here is linguistic tolerance. Everyone can be right. Is there a correct way to describe the, ah, pop made of milk, cocoa and fudge? Until 1947, it was people. (Why they seem to be con-centrated in New York is a mystery to the manufacturer.) Then, for the sake of uniformity with other Popsicle products, it was changed to

The Life and Musical of Peggy Lee

By Jay Sharbutt

TEW YORK - About five Nyears ago, a blonde, smoty-voiced, famous singer from Jamestown, North Dakota, began her autobiography. Alas, she sighs, "it began to be so long and tedious and" — she chuckles —

"It occurred to me to take bits out of it and do a musical in-

The singer: Peggy Lee. The musical; "Peg," about both the bad times and the good times in her life and career. It is propelled by 29 songs, some her hits of vesteryear, others new times written for the show.

It is scheduled to premiere in November, and it will be her Broadway debut in three respects - as a lyricist, co-author and star. The star part wasn't in her original plan.
"I didn'i intend to be in it at all originally," says Lee, a shy, softspoken woman. "I was writing it for someone else to do." That changed when she invited Irv and Margie Cowan, friends who own a hotel, to a party at her Beverly Hills home. Someone urged her to sing a bit of the score from the work-in-progress.

"They loved it," she reports.

"They said, We'd like to produce it." Then they summoned Broadway producer Zev Bufman to hear it. He also flipped, and asked to co-produce it. All insisted she be the star. Which is how it comes to pass that when interviewed, Lee, clad in a red turban and sunglasses, is busy rehearing for her debut as the star of a Broadway musical.

"Naturally, we're only touch-ing the highlights because I've lived a very active life and been around for a while," she says with a gentle smile.

Once described by the jazz critic Gene Lees as "the most consistently intelligent female singer of popular music in America," she's been around since the late '30s, when she broke in as a teen-ager, singing on small radio stations in North Dakota.

Her name was Norma Jean Egstrom then. Ken Kennedy, a pro-gram director on a station in Fargo, suggested she change her name to Peggy Lee, She did. And as Peggy Lee she became a star in

"And integrity with your mu-sic. He really dedicated himself to it. I think his whole life is music. As is mine."

At last report, her life in music includes the recording of 59 albums of songs. Songs like the finger-popping "Fever," the joyful "It's a Good Day," the sassy "Big Spender," the roaring Latino treatment of Richard Rodgers's "Lover," the wistful "Is That All There Is," to list a few.

A gifted lyricist, she also has collaborated on songwriting with some pretty fair tunesmiths, like Johnny Mercer, Duke Ellington, Victor Young, and Cy Boleman the last a longtime friend who is again working with her, this time as artistic consultant on "Peg."

The show offers a mix of her old his with new songs she has written with a young English pianist, Paul Horner. She co-authored the musical's book with playwright William Luce, author "The Belle of Amherst."

She has had a durable career, no question. But it almost came to a halt twice, the first time because of domestic bliss in the late 40s, when she was married to her first husband, the late Dave Barbour, guitarist with the Goodman

Lee, who with Barbour wrote two hits, "Manana" and "It's a Good Day," was thinking of dropping out of music then, per-haps write a song or two with him, but she was very content to be a bousewife and take care of their young daughter, Jicki.

"Td receive tremendous offers when I think of it now it's really quite funny — but I'd po-litely say no to these fantastic offers and go back to my house-work . . . I loved every minute do a couple of sides with a group of jazz musicians, top guys, and I thought, Well, that'd be all right, I can get a baby-sitter."

Encouraged by her husband, she returned to the recording studios, resulting in "Black Coffee," an album that is now a collector's item, and a resumption of her career — with the marriage, unfortunately, foundering in later years, with Barbour drinking

Then, in 1961, riding high, in beavy demand at the top clubs of Las Vegas, New York and London, she came down with double pneumonia and pleurisy. It forced her, she says, to include a respiratory machine as part of her backstage baggage for 10 years.

She needed five sessions a day with the machine — she nick-named it "Charlie" — just to keep going.

She doesn't have it now, she adds, happily noting that she was able to donate it and a backup to the American Long Association

10 years ago.
"I was given six months to live
— if I continued to work," she recalled of her illness. "I guess people do consider it rather mi-raculous that I was finally able to give those machines away."

Some consider it equally mira-cudous that she, like Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett, is a mid-dle-of-the-road survivor, still singing her own kind of music in an age of rock that has ranged from bubble to punk. She's reluctant to knock rock:

"I prefer whatever is good in mu-sic, like the Beatles' music, which I think I was one of the first to do. Paul McCartney, in fact, later wrote the title solo for an album of mine, 'Let's Love."

But rock's roar did alarm her when it first checked in the '50s. "Yes, because everything changed overnight," she says.
"But gradually, because we stood our ground, we've been able do continue with something that's sort of better musically.

You really have to believe in what you do, you know. And I couldn't believe in rock. It certainly is" - a quick grin - "remunerative. But you have to have a certain conscience about music, a certain integrity."

Little Mermaid Turns 70

By Bryan Wilder

C OPENHAGEN — For 70 years — minus four months — the Little Mermaid at the mouth of Copenhagen harbor has sat facing the sea. waiting for her prince to come back.

Tuesday, on her 70th birthday, she wore a floral crown and necklaces of Danish red and white, brass bands played, a government minister and the lord mayor of Copenhagen made speeches, and the Carlsberg Breweries served snacks and beer to 24 ambassadors and thousands of tourists.

But even for her birthday, there was no prince. Prince Henrik, Queen Margrethe's consort and the mermaid's official patron, was vacationing in France. Since she was cast in bronze to commemorate the love of a brewer for a ballerina and perched on a rock at Langelinie Pier on Aug. 23, 1913, the wistful symbol of Copenhagen has been photographed, embraced, climbed on and kissed by millions from all over the world.

She also has been splashed with red paint, used as a passive partner in a porno magazine photograph and in 1964 lost her head, sending her to a foundry for four months while a new one was cast. The hacksaw headsman was never found, but periodically the homicide division re
